Reflection of the week from Reverend Canon Michael Smith (York Minster)

We have to remember that asking questions is great. Asking big questions about big issues is fantastic. Questions are how we learn and grow. One of the great things about children is that they ask loads of questions. Unfortunately, they never ask the really big questions when you are ready for them or have time for them, but we should always respect their questions and answer them honestly, even if the answer is 'I don't know, but let's try and find out'. I remember a child once asked me what I thought God looked like. I could have referred to the huge number of images of God described in the bible. I could have talked about Jesus and that he was the image of God. In the end I got hold of a children's story book, a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and found the page which showed the Dad in the story, a large smiley man running helter-skelter towards his wayward son, arms outstretched to embrace him, ready to tell him he loved him – 'that's what God looks like' I said."

Yours sincerely
